Based in the San Francisco Bay Area, The Boneless Children Foundation's music ranges from simple, poetic creations to hard-hitting punk rock sideshows. Born & raised in St. Louis, Missouri, San Francisco transplant David Sophia Siegel leads his band of musical malcontents through the perilous environment of rock music today. This group has developed a unique sound that has earned them comparison to The Police, The Talking Heads, The Who and The Unicorns, among others, and is currently planning a West Coast tour. The band is also featured on San Francisco-based Thread Productions' compilation, "Dragon Slayers, Volume 2," was recently featured on NPR's Open Mic program, is featured in a blog on the New York Times website and was included by The Onion in its list of "Worst Band Names of 2007."

PRESS

"With Stars For Anyone, The Boneless Children Foundation has created a massive album that swerves and boogies with classic rock n'roll riffs and delightfully quirky and engaging lyrics."

-Jeff Bissell, WIRETAP MUSIC

"They make a plenty-noisy punk-rock racket, tempered by humor and just the right touch of melody."

-Nate Seltenreich, THE EAST BAY EXPRESS

"[N]otoriously Dead Milkmen-esque," "[bouncing] between druggy glam-rock extravagance and clever post-punk precision."

-Haya Swanhuysen, THE SF WEEKLY

"A mix of poetry, punk, glam rock – they know how to put on a good show."

-Una LaMarche, BLACK BOOK ONLINE
